REVIEW

Prior to developing a formal Appeal Brief, Appellants submit the following argument for review by more experienced Examiners under the pilot Pre-Appeal Brief Conference.

Appellants hereby request that the Conference attendees refer to the full argument of Appellants on pages 20-23 of the Amendment Under 37 CFR §1.116, filed on September 8, 2005, and do not herein repeat these arguments in their entirety.

In addition to these arguments, Appellants submit that, to one having ordinary skill in the art, the word "canister" in Tomat does not in any way convey a meaning of a directory structure. Indeed, the term clearly conveys a simple memory structure of some sort, not a directory structure.

Second, prior to proceeding to developing the Appeal Brief, Appellants submit that the Examiner has repeatedly failed to provide documentation supporting his position that the word "canister" is used in the art as equivalent to the terminology "directory structure."

Instead, in the Advisory Action dated September 21, 2005, the Examiner attempts to fill in this gap by starting out with the IEEE dictionary definitions of "file directory", "directory", and "directory entry", and proceeding to attempt to rationale that the "canisters"

Appellants' Additional Arguments for Pre-Appeal Brief Conference

used in the camera of Tomat satisfy one or more of these definitions.

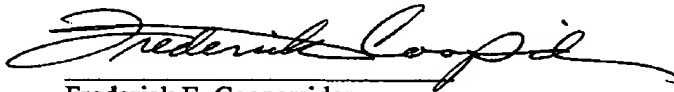

Appellants submit that the problem with the Examiner's approach is that Tomat is also presumed to be at least one having ordinary skill in the art. If Tomat had intended that the term "canister" be equivalent to "directory", then either he should have so stated in that reference or the Examiner has the initial burden of demonstrating that one of ordinary skill in the art has alternative terminology (e.g., "canister") to "directory."

The Examiner has clearly failed to meet this initial burden.

In view of the foregoing arguments, along with those arguments currently of record in the Amendment Under 37 CFR §1.116, filed on September 8, 2005, Applicants submit that the rejection currently of record fails to meet the Examiner's initial burden of a prima facie rejection, since the plain meaning of the language of the independent claims is clearly not satisfied, as that language would be interpreted by one having ordinary skill in the art. Accordingly, Appellants respectfully submit that claims 1-45, all the claims presently pending in the application, are clearly patentably distinct over the prior art of record and are in condition for allowance.

Respectfully Submitted,
